

Thomas Wolf

Principal and Founder, WolfBrown

Dr. Thomas Wolf is the author of The Nightingale's Sonata. He has had a distinguished career as musician, educator, consultant, author, and administrator. A member of the eminent Luboshutz-Goldovsky Russian family of musicians, he has soloed with the Philadelphia Orchestra and is an accomplished flutist. He and his brother Andrew founded the Bay Chamber Concerts in Maine and he has served as the Executive Director of the New England Foundation for the Arts. He is currently a principal with the consulting firm WolfBrown, and his clients have included Carnegie Hall, the Kennedy Center, the Boston Symphony, and the British Museum. A graduate of Harvard University, he lives in Cambridge, Massachusetts.